This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

The total specie value of the foreign commerce of the United States—imports and exports—was larger than during any previous year, with the exception of the years 1873 and 1874.

The value of the exports of domestic merchandise from the United States was larger than during any previous fiscal year in the history of the country.

From the year 1863 to the year 1873, the value of imports of merchandise into the United States largely exceeded the value of the exports of merchandise from the United States, the excess of imports ranging from $39,371,368 in 1863 to $182,417,491 in 1872. During the years ended June 30, 1876, 1877, 1878, and 1879, however, the value of exports of domestic merchandise from the United States has greatly exceeded the value of imports of foreign merchandise into the United States, the excess of exports increasing rapidly from year to year.

It appears from this table that the value of the imports of merchandise fell from $642,136,210 during the year 1873 to $437,051,532 during the year 1878. The value of imports of merchandise during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1879, amounted to $445,777,775, exceeding the imports of the preceding year by the sum of $8,726,243.

The excess of the value of exports of merchandise over that of imports was larger during the last fiscal year than during any previous year; and the excess of the value of exports of merchandise over the value of imports, during the last four years, amounted to $753,271,475.

The specie value of the exports of domestic merchandise from the United States has exhibited a steady and rapid increase since the year 1868, with the exception of the years 1875 and 1876, when a slight decline from 1874 was noticeable, but this was more than recovered in 1877 and largely exceeded in 1878 and 1879.

The value of such exports during the year ended June 30, 1869, amounted to only $275,166,697; during the year ended June 30, 1873, to $505,033,439, and during the year ended June 30, 1879, to $698,340,790.

The value of the exports of domestic merchandise during the last fiscal year, exceeded the value of such exports during the preceding year by the sum of $17,631,522, or 2½ per cent.

It appears from the above table that during each year since 1861, the exports of specie have exceeded the imports of specie. The largest excess of such exports over imports was reached during the year 1864, when it amounted to $92,280,929.

Since the year 1875, the excess of exports of specie has rapidly declined, amounting during the year ended June 30, 1878, to only $3,918,811, and during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1879, to only $4,701,441.*

* The excess of the value of imports of specie over exports, from June 30, 1879, to November 1, 1879, the time of closing this report, amounted to about fifty-two millions of dollars.

The following summary table shows the increase in the value of the exports of the articles named in the foregoing table, during the fiscal year 1879, as compared with the exports of the same articles during the fiscal year 1868 and 1878:

It appears from the above table that the value of the exports of the commodities therein enumerated, during the year 1879, exceeded the value of the exports of the same commodities during the year ended June 30, 1868, by the sum of $291,560,413, constituting 68 per cent. of the total increase in the value of the exports of domestic merchandise from the United States from 1868 to 1879.

Attention is directed to the marked increase in the value of the exports of agricultural implements, live animals, bread-stuffs, manufactures of cotton; iron, and manufactures of iron; leather, petroleum, and provisions since the year 1868. The increase in the value of the exports of certain of these articles is the more remarkable from the fact that their market price has considerably fallen during the last eleven years. This is indicated by the table of prices of domestic exports on page XLIV of this report.

The total value of the exports of the commodities mentioned in the above table, during the year ended June 30, 1879, exceeded the total value of the exports of the same commodities during the year ended June 30, 1878, by the sum of $22,988,336.

The following table exhibits the increase in the values of the exports of the commodities named in the foregoing statement:

By comparing the data furnished in the two foregoing tables, it will be observed that the increase in the quantity of the staple articles exported was much greater than the increase in the value of such exports. Thus, the quantity of wheat exported exhibited an increase of 122.2 per cent., whereas the value of wheat exported exhibited an increase of only 91 per cent. Again, the quantity of lard exported exhibited an increase of 94 per cent., whereas the value exhibited an increase of only 1.9 per cent. This was due to a fall in the prices, as may be seen by reference to the table F on page XLIV.

EXPORTS OF DOMESTIC MERCHANDISE TO EACH FOREIGN COUNTRY.

The following table exhibits, by countries, the exports of domestic merchandise from the United States. Mixed gold and currency values are given in this table, in pursuance of the practice which has been adhered to in the preparation of the annual statements of foreign commerce of the United States since the year 1861, with respect to all statements in detail.

During the year ended June 30, 1879, the exports of domestic merchandise to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland amounted to $346,485,881, and constituted 50 per cent. of the total value of exports of domestic merchandise from the United States during that year. The value of exports of domestic merchandise to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland fell from $383,606,911, during the year ended June 30, 1878, to $346,485,881 during the year ended June 30, 1879, a decrease of $37,121,030. The principal falling off in the value of our exports to the United Kingdom was in cotton, wheat, corn, and lard, but the quantity of each of these articles exported to that country during the last fiscal year was about the same as during the preceding fiscal year, the falling off in the total value of such exports being attributable to the fall in the market prices of those articles. The value of the exports of domestic merchandise to France, on the other hand, increased from $54,289,918 to $88,194,041 during the same period, an increase of $33,904,123. The increased exports to France consisted mainly of wheat.

It will also be observed that there was a very considerable increase in the value of our exports to Russia, Spain, and the Hawaiian Islands.

DOMESTIC EXPORTS BY COMMODITIES.

The following statement exhibits, by commodities, the value of the exports of domestic merchandise during the years ended June 30, 1878 and 1879, stated in the order of the value of such exports during the year ended June 30, 1879.

It appears from the above table that during the year ended June 30, 1879, there was an increase in the the value of the exports of bread and breadstuffs of $28,577,687, over the value of such exports during the year 1878—an increase of 15.72 per cent. The exports of cotton and manufactures of cotton decreased $18,311,944, as compared with the value of such exports during the year ended June 30, 1878, a falling off of 9.56 per cent. As has been already observed, there was a considerable falling off in the prices of the staple articles of domestic products exported during the year 1879, as compared with the prices which prevailed during the year 1878. From the foregoing statement, in connection with the table of export prices presented on page XLIV of this report, may be collated many facts of interest in regard to the general character of our export trade.

The value of the exports of bread and breadstuffs during each of the last two years has exceeded the value of the exports of any other commodity. This is especially noticeable from the fact that during every preceding year since 1821, except during the war period—1861 to 1865—the value of the exports of raw cotton exceeded that of any other commodity.

The following table exhibits the increase in the value of the exports of bread and breadstuffs, cotton, provisions, mineral oils, and tobacco—the five leading articles of export—during the years 1821, 1830, 1840, 1850, and from 1860 to 1879, inclusive:

b Return of mineral oil products exported are incomplete for these two years.

From the year 1821 to the year 1860 the exports of raw cotton from the United States to foreign countries constituted 53 per cent. of the total value of exports of merchandise, and from 1866 to 1877, inclusive, 48 per cent., and during the last two fiscal years to about 25 per cent. of the total value of such exports.

In presenting the foregoing table, it appears proper to explain the method pursued by this office in its preparation. Such an explanation was given in the last annual report, as follows:

EXPORTS OF PRODUCTS OF AGRICULTURE.

Much difficulty has been met in the attempt to classify domestic exports so as to show separately, "Products of agriculture," "Products of manufacture," "Products of mining," "Products of forestry," and "Products of the fisheries." Such a classification is calculated to throw much light upon the commercial and industrial interests of the country, yet it has been found to be impracticable to make any exact fractional separation of domestic exports into the classes mentioned. This may be explained by reference to the class termed "Products of agriculture." Evidently, all commodities, in the condition in which they leave the farm, fall within this class. But the materials of which many manufactured articles are composed are, also, products of agriculture. The additional value given to such materials, in the various processes of manufacture, ranges from less than one to more than ninety-nine per cent. of the market value of the manufactured article. Therefore, a schedule purporting to embrace products of agriculture exported, but omitting the exports of all commodities upon which even the smallest amount of labor has been bestowed in some process of manufacture, would be imperfect.

Again, there are many manufactured articles, the market value of which is derived from labor bestowed in agriculture, in mining, in manufactures, in forestry, and in the fisheries. It is impossible, therefore, to frame a schedule embracing all the commodities entering into any one of these classes, without trenching largely upon one or more of the others. Besides, all articles of commerce acquire their market value, to a greater or less extent, from the cost of transportation. This is especially true with respect to minerals, clay, stone, and other heavy articles of low value. By analogy, therefore, it might be proper to add to the above-mentioned classification of commodities, "Products of transportation." But, aside from the value given to all commodities by the act of transportation, an absolutely accurate schedule of exports of products of agriculture should embrace the value of all products, in the condition in which they leave the farm, and also the value of the products of agriculture constituting the materials of which manufactured articles are composed. The collection of such information would in all cases be attended with great difficulty; and, with respect to highly-wrought manufactures, be utterly impracticable. Evidently, any proposed schedule of exports of the products of agriculture must, from the force of these circumstances, be discretionary, and, therefore, only approximately correct.

In view of these circumstances, it was deemed proper, in preparing this table of exports of agricultural products, to include commodities in the forms in which they usually leave the farm; also flour, meal, oil-cake, pork, packed meats, and preserved fruits, since the value of these articles is chiefly derived from farm labor. The progress of the exportation of agricultural products, from year to year, is illustrated by means of this table.

Other schedules might be framed embracing a greater or less number of articles, the materials of which are, in whole or in part, the product of labor bestowed in agricultural pursuits. The limits of every such schedule will, of course, be influenced by any special object which the compiler may have in view.

Although there was a falling off in the value of sugar imported into the United States during the year ended June 30, 1879, as compared with the year ended June 30, 1878, of $538,442, yet there was an increase in the quantity of sugar imported, amounting to 266,169,885 pounds. This is explained by the fact that the average import price of sugar fell from 4.72 cents per pound during the year ended June 30, 1878, to 3.89 cents per pound during the year ended June 30, 1879, a falling off of .83 cent per pound, or 17 per cent.

The increase or decrease in the imports of all articles during the last fiscal year, stated by quantities and by values, is presented in the statement of this Bureau on the commerce and navigation of the United States for the quarter year ended June 30, 1879.

The excess of the value of exports over imports of merchandise in our trade with Great Britain amounted, during the year ended June 30, 1879, to $240,289,627, and largely exceeded the excess of the value of exports over imports of merchandise in our trade with every other country. The value of the exports of merchandise from the United States to the United Kingdom, during the last fiscal year, appears to have been more than three times as great as the value of the imports of merchandise from that country into the United States.

The extraordinary increase in the tonnage employed in the foreign commerce of the United States since the year 1865, is accounted for for by the rapidly growing demands for freighting facilities required by the increased exportation of agricultural products from the United States—commodities which require a much larger amount of space on shipboard, in proportion to their value, than does the merchandise imported into the United States from foreign countries.

The total tonnage entered at seaports of the United States from foreign countries increased from 11,530,527 tons, during the year ended June 30, 1878, to 13,768,137 tons during the year ended June 30, 1879, an increase of 2,237,610 tons, or about 19 per cent. The American tonnage entered, however, exhibited an increase of only 40,306 tons, or 1 per cent., while the foreign tonnage entered exhibited an increase of 2,197,304 tons, or nearly 26 per cent.

The following table, showing the value of imports and of exports in American and in foreign vessels, also indicates very clearly the position of the American merchant-marine in our commerce with foreign nations:

NOTE.—The above figures do not include the amounts carried in cars and other land vehicles since July 1, 1870. Exports are stated in mixed gold and currency values since 1861.

The column of percentages in the foregoing table presents succinctly the story of the former ascendancy, and, of the decadence of the branch of our merchant marine engaged in foreign commerce.

The principal decline of American shipping engaged in foreign commerce took place between the years 1858 and 1864. During that period the percentage of the total value of imports and exports carried in American vessels fell from 73.7 to 27.5 per cent.

There was a falling off in the total value of imports and exports in American vessels from $510,331,027 in 1857, to $272,015,697 in 1879; but an increase in the total value of imports and exports in foreign vessels, from $213,519,796 in 1857, to $911,269,232 in 1879. During the six years ended June 30, 1878, the percentage of imports and exports carried in American vessels remained nearly stationary, but there has been a marked decline in the value of commerce carried in American vessels during the last fiscal year.

CAUSES OF THE DECLINE OF AMERICAN TONNAGE.

Although the value of the exports of domestic merchandise from the United States largely exceeds the value of the imports of foreign merchandise into the United States, yet there is a large preponderance of foreign tonnage employed in the foreign commerce of this country.

In view of the importance of this subject, I have thought proper to present the following extract from my report for the year ended June 30, 1878:

"In considering the maritime interests of the United States it is important to distinguish between the situation of vessels employed in the coastwise or home trade, and that of vessels employed in our trade with foreign countries. The coastwise or home trade has, from the organization of the government, been confined by law exclusively to American vessels, whereas, in our foreign commerce, American vessels and the vessels belonging to almost every other commercial nation compete with each other upon equal terms under those relations of maritime reciprocity which have been established by treaty, or in pursuance of the act of May 24, 1828.

"By this act it was provided, 'That, upon satisfactory evidence being given to the President of the United States, by the government of any foreign nation, that no discriminating duties of tonnage or impost are imposed or levied in the ports of the said nation, upon vessels wholly belonging to citizens of the United States, or upon the produce, manufactures, or merchandise imported in the same from the United States, or from any foreign country, the President is hereby authorized to issue his proclamation, declaring that the foreign discriminating duties of tonnage and impost within the United States are, and shall be, suspended and discontinued, so far as respects the vessels of the said foreign nation, and the produce, manufactures, or merchandise imported into the United States in the same, from the said foreign nation, or from any other foreign country; the said suspension to take effect from the time of such notification being given to the President of the United States, and to continue so long as the reciprocal exemption of vessels belonging to citizens of the United States, and their cargoes, as aforesaid, shall be continued, and no longer.'

"At the present time, 59 per cent. of the tonnage of the country is employed in the coastwise trade. This branch of our maritime commerce preserves the art of ship-building among us, and sustains a large force of seamen upon which the country may rely for the recruitment of its naval service in time of war. It is only in the branch of our merchant-marine which is employed in foreign commerce that there has been any decadence.

"The decline and long-continued depression of the ship-building and shipping interests connected with the foreign commerce of this country appear, at first sight, strange and anomalous. There is found in this country an abundance of all the materials for building both wooden and iron vessels, and our ship-builders possess the requisite talents and enterprise for utilizing such materials. In seamanship and in the conduct of maritime affairs, American citizens were, for more than sixty years, distinguished among the nations of the globe. The population, the wealth, and the internal commerce of the country have constantly increased, and our industries have exhibited from decade to decade a steady advancement.

"But the decline of that branch of the American merchant marine which is engaged in foreign commerce is due in a great measure to the following circumstances: Probably no other branch of American industry comes so directly into competition with foreign industries, as do those of building vessels and operating them in international commerce. As already stated, under our relations of maritime reciprocity the vessels of nearly every foreign nation enter American ports from foreign countries upon an equality with American vessels. Neither tariff legislation, nor navigation laws, nor transportation charges, nor any other natural or accidental circumstance intervenes to repress or shut out foreign competition. Evidently, under such conditions, the nation which can build and operate vessels the cheapest, must eventually secure the principal share of the carrying trade in our foreign commerce. This has taken place, and the fact is clearly recorded in the statistics of tonnage hereinbefore presented.

"So long as wooden sailing-vessels were the only vehicles of commerce upon the ocean, American tonnage rapidly increased. This was mainly due to the greater abundance and cheapness of ship-building materials in this country than in almost any other country. The United States had, about the year 1850, nearly attained to the first rank among the maritime nations of the globe. The genius and the talents of American naval architects and ship-builders were stimulated to their best efforts, and our clipper ships became renowned in all parts of the world for their superiority, both in point of speed and seaworthiness. But the introduction of iron as a ship-building material, and the rapid substitution of steam-vessels for sailing-vessels since the year 1860, has produced a marked change, throwing the advantage in the cost of ship-building very largely upon the side of Great Britain. The change from wooden to iron vessels began to take place about the year 1857. The destruction and transfer to other nationalities of American vessels during the late civil war also had a very depressing effect upon our maritime interests; and the inflation of prices in this country, resulting from the depreciation of the national currency, greatly added to the difficulty of competing in iron-ship-building. Under these circumstances, the merchant marine of Great Britain gained an unprecedented ascendency in international commerce.

"During the year 1856 the tonnage of British vessels entered at seaports of the United States from foreign countries was less than one-third the tonnage of American vessels entered; but during the year ended June 30, 1879, the tonnage of American vessels entered was less than one-third of the tonnage of British vessels entered.

"The increase of British tonnage, and the decline of American tonnage, are also to some extent due to the fact that Great Britain has, from the beginning, pursued the policy of aiding steamship lines by liberal compensation for the transportation of the mails, such compensation being generally in the nature of subsidies, until the increase of trade has rendered them self-sustaining. Such aids have, however, been much less effective in fostering the maritime interests of Great Britain, than have the advantages possessed by that country in the cost of building and operating vessels.

"While it is impossible, with any degree of confidence, to predict the future of that branch of our merchant marine engaged in commerce with foreign nations, there are indications that American ship-builders and ship-owners may, in the course of a few years, be able once more to enter the lists with their foreign competitors. The difference between the cost of building iron vessels in this country and in Great Britain is much less at the present time than it was ten years ago. This is due chiefly to the reduction in the wages of labor and in the prices of materials in the United States. The fact that it has recently become possible for many products of American manufacture to be sold in foreign markets in competition with the products of long established industries of other manufacturing countries, inspires the hope that the intelligent and persistent efforts which have been put forth by American ship-builders, in the construction of iron vessels, chiefly for our home trade, will ultimately enable them to compete with foreign ship-builders in supplying vessels for our trade with foreign countries."

TONNAGE ENTERED AT THE PRINCIPAL SEAPORTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The following table exhibits the tonnage entered at the principal and other seaports of the United States, during the years ended June 30, 1878 and 1879, respectively.

Of the total tonnage entered at ports of the United States during the year ended June 30, 1879, 49.11 per cent. entered at the port of New York; 8.26 per cent. at Boston; 9.55 per cent. at Philadelphia, and 9.98 per cent. at Baltimore. The tonnage entered at these four ports during that year amounted to 10,489,660 tons, and constituted 76.19 per cent. of the total tonnage entered at seaports of the United States.

I inclose to you herewith a table showing the value of the trade of the United States with each foreign country, during the year ended June 30, 1879; a table showing the tonnage of vessels entered at seaports of the United States from 1853 to 1879; tables showing the value of imports, of domestic exports, and of foreign exports from 1850 to 1879; and a table showing the average annual export prices of the principal staple domestic commodities each year from 1855 to 1879, inclusive.

* This information, in regard to fishery products other than whale, is incomplete, owing to the fact that there is no law requiring all products of the fisheries to be reported to the customs-officers when landed within a customs-district. It is compiled chiefly from information obtained through the personal efforts and inquiries of the customs-officers of the several ports from which it is practicable to obtain returns.

* As the returns received by this bureau, of passengers departing from the United States, do not distinguish permanent emigrants from transient travelers, the figures entered in this column have been derived from the body of the table, by deducting the number of "non-immigrants" from the whole number of departures for each year, the process being based on the consideration that, of the former number, those who are reported as "citizens of the United States" have previously departed, and have been embraced in the reports of departures, while those reported as "aliens not intending to remain," will depart in future and will be so reported. These figures will, therefore, be substantially correct for any series of years, but may not be strictly so for any one particular year.

NOTE.—This statement includes only such movements of vessels in the coastwise trade and fisheries as may come within the provisions of sections 4349, et seq., of the Revised Statutes of the United States, requiring entry or clearance to be made, under certain conditions; such as, for instance, if a vessel has a certain amount of foreign goods on board, or passes from a port in one great coasting-district to a port in another great coasting-district, &c. Since the movements of vessels in the coastwise trade, requiring entry and clearance to be made, comprise but a small portion of the movements of such vessels between ports of the United States, this statement is a very incomplete view of the entire movements of tonnage in the coastwise trade and fisheries.
